What do Export Controls have to do with me?

Tell Me

1. Export control regulations apply to information as well as things — and when controlled information is given to a non-US person it's considered to be an export to that person's country, even if it happens in the US, even if it happens on a university campus. If you collaborate with people in other countries, your emails are exports. When you travel, you're exporting everything you take with you and, of course, you're exporting when you ship an item outside the US. These could all lead to export control violations with consequences for you and for UNC Charlotte.

Info

To learn more, please visit UNC Charlotte's Export Control website.

If you have any questions, please contact John Jacobs, Export Control Officer, Office of Research Compliance, at 704-687-1877 or via e-mail at jjacob2@uncc.edu.

Related Articles

Page: What do Export Controls regulate?
Page: How do I know whether my research is fundamental?
Page: What do Export Controls have to do with me?
Page: What do Export Controls usually cover?